

The nearby town of Julian is at the center of a historic mining district — the discovery of gold there in 1870 brought such an influx of people and activity that it was declared the county seat. The Julian Pioneer Museum features exhibits that portray those early times. Today, Julian is a bustling tourist attraction, especially known for its Apple Days Festival in the fall.

Camping Park

William Heise CountyPark

Situated 4,200 feet above sea level in a forest of pines and oaks along the northern extremity of the Cuyamaca Mountain Range, Heise County Park is a gem of San Diego County.

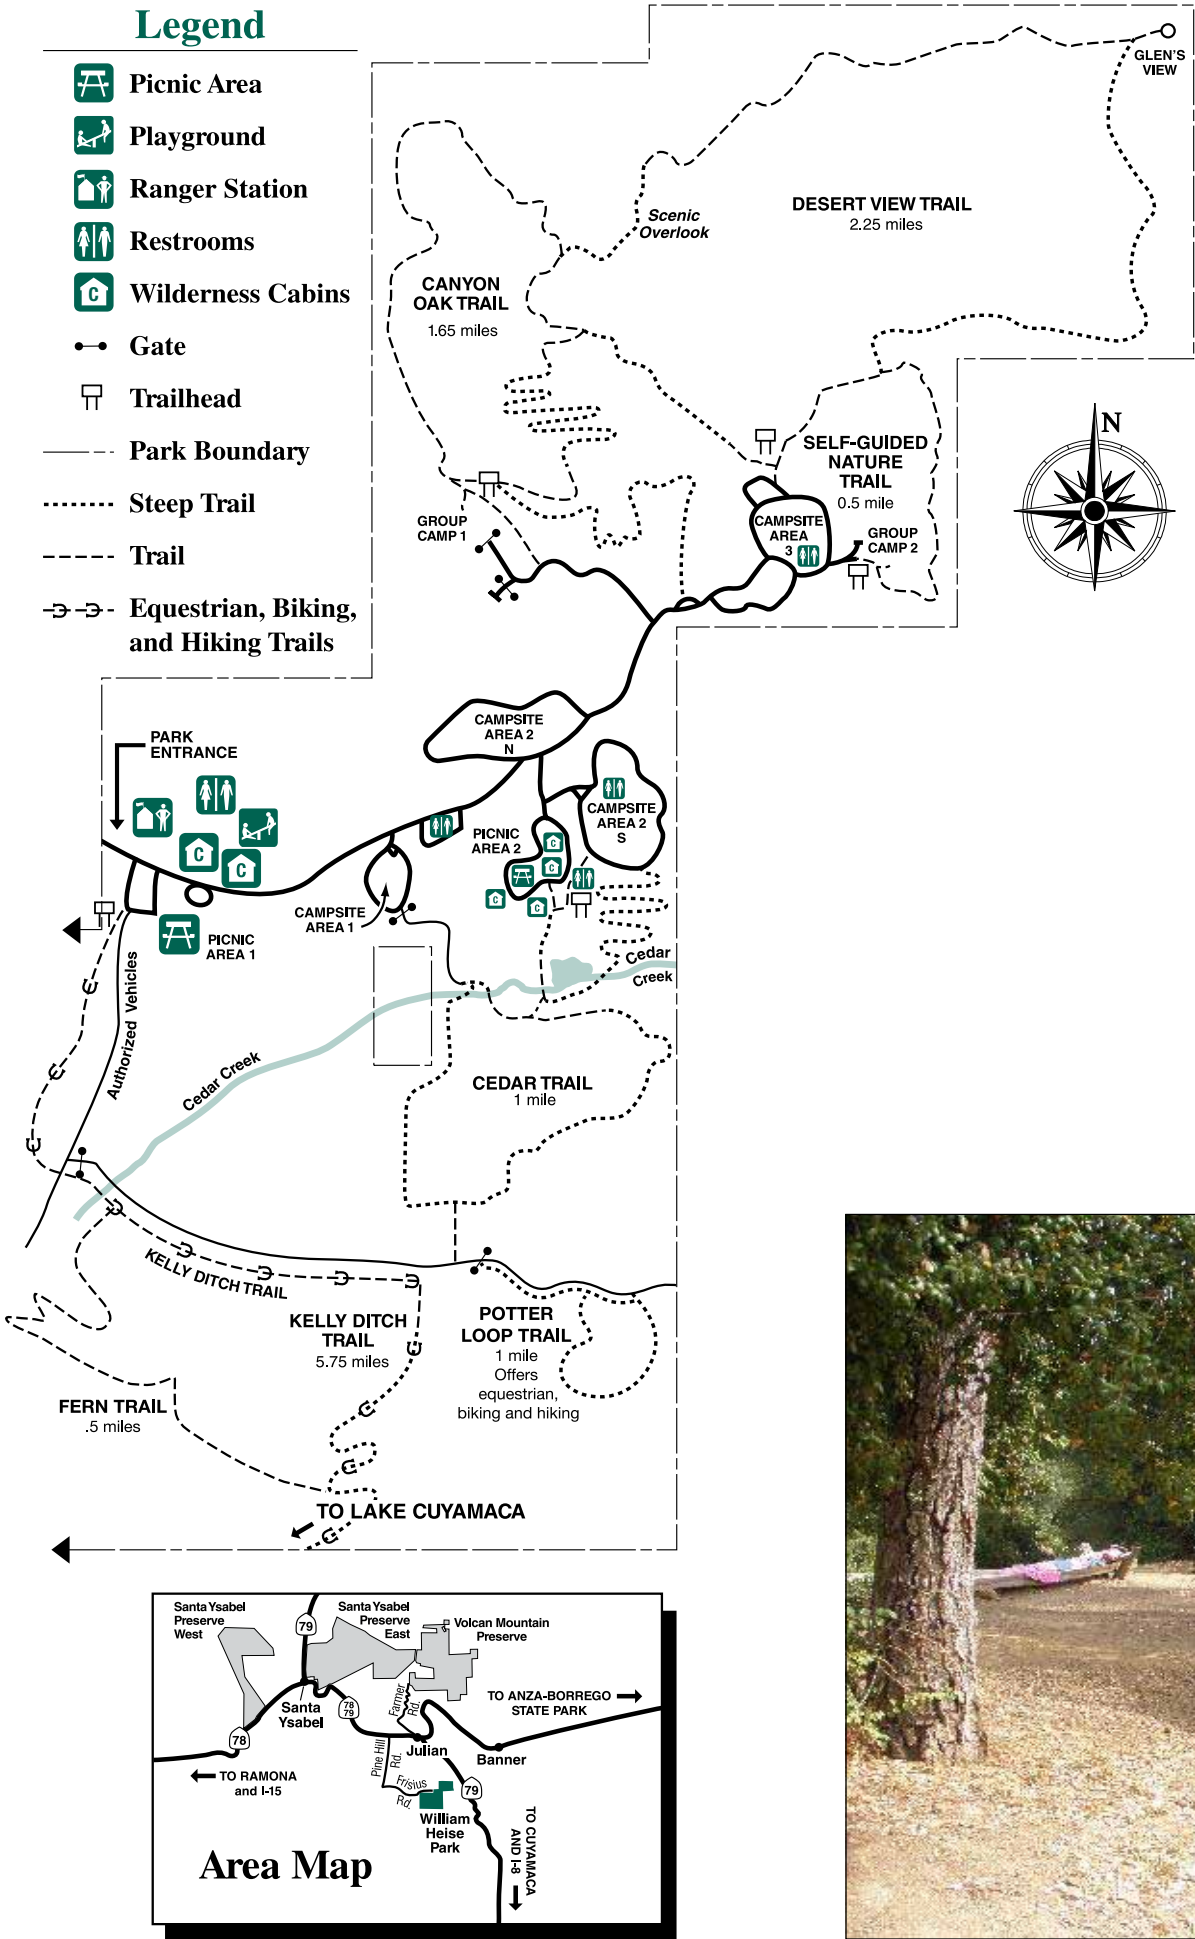

The park spans over 1,000-acres and each season brings dramatic changes. From winter snowfall and spring wildflowers, to the fall changing of colors, there is always something new to see at Heise.

Mule deer are frequently seen throughout the park as well as large flocks of Rio Grande turkey. Other common visitors include the gray fox, bobcats, the golden eagle and an occasional mountain lion.

In 2003, the Cedar Fire burned much of the 1,000 acres of oak, pine, and cedar forests, and the face of the park was dramatically changed. As devastating as the fire was, our visitors now have the opportunity to witness nature's way of rejuvenating Heise Park to its original grandeur.

Hikers can enjoy more than 10-miles of trail.

William Heise welcomes an array of activities including mountain biking.

Hiking/Day Use

Day visitors may make use of two shaded picnic areas, one with a playground nearby. Hikers will enjoy the spectacular views from the more than ten miles of multi-use non motorized trails.

The park also offers 42 tent only sites for those seeking more of a wilderness experience.

Tent & RV Camping

Campers have the option of choosing RV sites with or without electricity, tent sites, primitive group sites, or wilderness cabins. Each site includes a table, a fire ring, a tent or RV pad, and a parking space. Water is nearby, and hot showers are available.

The park offers 20 partial hook-up sites that can accommodate trailers, campers, tents, and motor homes up to 40 ft. There are 37 non hook-up sites that can fit trailers, campers, tents, and motor homes up to 40 ft.

The park also offers 42 tent only sites for those seeking more of a wilderness experience.

An abundance of wildlife contributes greatly to the overall experience that park users have while exploring the park.
